Course Description
Of the endeavors that contribute to the quality of human life, business ranks with art, science, and education. Yet business also raises its share of ethical challenges. In this course we will cover issues including debates over egoism, altruism, and predation; rights, justice, profits, and competition; and business-consumer relations. We will discuss theoretical readings and accounts of real-life cases.

Course Goals
My goals are to assist you in improving your Knowledge, Skills, and Habits.

Knowledge: Major issues and major thinkers.

Skills: Listening, Note-taking, Reading, Interpretation, Argument, Speaking, Writing, Technology-use, Sociability.

Habits: Commitment, Self-reliance, Resourcefulness, Perseverance, Timeliness.

Topics and Assignments
* Midterm Test: 800 words in response to questions based on the course materials. Weighting: 10% of your final grade. Questions based directly on the course materials. For example, I will take quotations from them and ask you to explain their meaning and significance. On the last class day before Fall Break.

* Final Exam: 1,600 words in response to questions based on the whole semester’s course materials. Weighting: 20-80% of your final grade, depending on how many optional essays you write. Questions will be based directly on the course materials. On the Exam-Week date set by Registrar.

* Optional Essays: For each of the seven topics, you may write an optional 800-word essay. Weighting: Each essay will be worth 10% of your final grade and will reduce by that amount the weighting of your final exam.

On the Optional Essays
Each of our topics will be about a controversial issue in business ethics. Your essay should (a) demonstrate good understanding of the course materials for that topic, (b) present the arguments of both/all sides of the controversy, and (c) develop your own informed opinion on the topic in direct response to those arguments.

In grading your optional essays, I will use this template:
